

ABSTRACT

With the purpose of developing a widely applicable technique capable of preparing oral granular formulations having good handling properties and rapidly disintegrating or dissolving in the mouth during administration or when they are dissolved or suspended before use, the present invention provides oral granular formulations containing no or little binders and having fast-disintegrating or -dissolving properties.